Ancient Order of Hibernians Report Another Prosperous Year.

Membership Increased and All Divisions Have Good Treasuries.

Annual Meeting Tuesday Night Transacts Important Business.

SOME WISE SUGGESTIONS SUBMITTED

The County Board of the Ancient Order of Hibernians held their annual meeting Tuesday night at Hibernian Hall, with representatives present from every division. The reports submitted by Secretary Will Meehan and Treasurer John Mulloy were most gratifying to the delegates present, showing as they did a substantial growth in membership during the past year and a handsome increase in the financial resources of all the divisions.

County President Tom Keenan presided over the last session of the old board, which had little business to transact other than submitting reports of the past year's work and the financial standing of the order in Jefferson county. The reports were complete in detail and gave general satisfaction to all. When this business had been completed the old board adjourned sine die, having performed their duties faithfully and well.

The new board was immediately called to order by County President Keenan, who installed Messrs. John Mulloy, Newton G. Rogers and Peter J. Cusick, representatives of Division 1.

Upon motion it was decided that the County Board of Directors should consist of seven members as heretofore, all of whom had been re-elected by their divisions. There had been some doubt as to the number required by the constitution, and this action disposes of the question until the national convention.

The County Board congratulated the old Board of Directors upon the work done during the past year, which was the most successful in the history of the order in Louisville. To their efforts are in a large measure due the splendid numerical and financial standing of the order. They had also secured the beautiful new hall and paraphernalia for the exemplification of the new ritual, and besides had visited and encouraged the divisions as had never been done before.

The County President, who holds office for two years, announced that the next business would be the election of officers, which resulted in the selection of the following to guide the destinies of the organization for the next year:

President—Thomas Keenan.
Vice President—John Hennessy.
Recording Secretary—William T. Meehan.

Treasurer—John Mulloy.
Board of Directors—Thomas Keenan, Thomas Dolan, William T. Meehan, John Cavanaugh, John Hennessy, Jerry Hallahan, John Mulloy.

County President Keenan then delivered his annual address, thanking the County Board, the divisions and individual members for their cordial and hearty support in the past. The divisions were all in a flourishing condition, and he urged those present to continue their efforts to increase the membership, which he hoped would double what it now is before the assembling of the next national and State conventions. His remarks were well received, and the expressions heard on all sides indicated that the wise policy pursued during the past year will be continued.

State Secretary James Coleman was introduced and delivered a timely address, making wise suggestions to the board and urging all divisions to promptly notify the County President when initiations will take place, thus enabling him to select in time the team to confer the degrees. There are two degree teams and notification will be necessary in order to avoid confusion. The subject of consolidation of all the divisions was the subject of protracted and animated debate. The divisions and membership are about equally divided on the question, and there are many who while they oppose one division would cheerfully vote for two. The whole matter was finally referred to a special committee, composed of Messrs. Will Meehan, Newton G. Rogers and Joe P. McGinn, who were instructed to visit all the divisions with the view of learning the real sentiment of the membership at large, after which final action will be taken and the whole question settled for some time to come.

Regarding the annual celebration nothing definite was done. All the members seem to favor a reunion and picnic, but action was deferred until the next meeting, when the Auditing Committee and other special committees submit their reports.

The County Board of the Ancient Order of Hibernians as now constituted is an able and influential body of men, and it will be a matter of surprise and regret if they do not succeed in increasing the usefulness and power of this noble order.

Two cups of sugar, one-half cup of butter, one cup of sweet milk, two cups of flour, one cup of cornstarch, whites of seven eggs beaten stiff, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Stir the butter and sugar to a cream; sift the flour and cornstarch together; add the eggs last. Mix in an earthen vessel and flavor with lemon. This makes a fine cornstarch cake.

ENJOYABLE RECEPTION.

Mrs. John J. Reilly Entertains Limerick Democratic Club.

The members of the Limerick Democratic Club were last Friday night given a reception by Mrs. John J. Reilly at her residence, 711 Oldham street, that for pleasure and hospitality surpassed any ever before recorded in that section of the city.

The charming and good-natured hostess is the wife of Corporal John Reilly, and among those invited were a number of his fellow-officers. The club is composed of prominent and energetic young men of Limerick, who have now voted Mrs. Reilly their patroness.

All the guests entered into the spirit of the occasion, and the beautiful moonlight added much to the jollity that prevailed. The hostess was assisted in receiving by Miss Katie Clark, whose artistic rendition of several difficult piano solos won for her much praise. Officers Tom Mulverhill and James Kinnearney, two of the very finest, were the star actors of the evening, creating much mirth, as did also Jim Ross and Sergeant Will Wales. During the evening songs were sung by Capt. Schneider, one of the guests of honor, whose rendition of "The Honey-suckle and the Bee" was pronounced the hit of the evening; and the Reilly brothers, John, Dave and William.

Others who contributed to the merry making were Officer Jim Murphy, Steve Read, James McKernan, Dennis Reardon and John Hennessy. The company was served with a bounteous collation on the lawn and the merriment was there kept up until the moon disappeared.

INJURIES ARE SERIOUS.

John O'Sullivan Run Over While Unloading a Freight Car.

John J. O'Sullivan, for many years a respected and valued employee of the Louisville & Nashville railroad, was run over by a car Thursday evening and sustained injuries which may prove fatal.

Shortly before 6 o'clock he, with a number of others, was unloading a car, and had but a few minutes more to work. While thus engaged he was knocked down and run over by a car which a switch engine was backing on the track adjoining, and when picked up by his fellow-workmen it was found that O'Sullivan's arm had been torn to shreds. The ambulance was summoned and the unfortunate man at once removed to Sts. Mary and Elizabeth Hospital, where Dr. George Griffiths amputated the injured member. Mr. O'Sullivan is fifty-five years old and resides with his family at 923 Dumesnil street. On account of his age and the loss of blood his condition was regarded extremely critical when last reports were received.

PICNIC AT FERN GROVE.

Next Saturday, August 10, the employees of the Courier-Journal Job Printing Company will give their second annual excursion and picnic to Fern Grove on the steamer Columbia, leaving the foot of First street at 9 a. m. and 2 p. m. A band of musicians accompanies each boat and an abundance of refreshments will be on hand. The great majority of the Courier-Journal employees are young people who know how to provide a good time for their friends. The employees of the other printing offices have been invited and there will doubtless be a large and jolly crowd. The tickets are only twenty-five cents, children under twelve years being free.

HAYRIDES POPULAR.

Recently there have been a large number of hayrides by young people of this city, the destination of many being Kenwood Park, whose genial proprietor, Charles Schuck, grants special privileges on all such occasions. Connected with this pretty place is a very shady park where private outings may be enjoyed during the week free of charge. Kenwood Park is at the end of the Third-street car line, and is well conducted, only the better class of people being admitted.

DEAD FROM HEAT.

Patrick Mulloy, a well known and aged resident of the West End, was one of the victims of the recent hot spell. He was overcome Sunday afternoon and expired an hour later, despite the efforts of several physicians. The deceased was employed at Vogt's machine shop, and leaves four grown children. His funeral took place from St. Patrick's church, being very largely attended.

FINISHED THE JUBILEE.

Last Sunday at St. William's church 250 persons finished their jubilee, which closed for the Catholics of this diocese on Wednesday. Father Murphy has begun the erection of his residence near the church, and feels greatly encouraged by the kindly treatment he is receiving on all sides.

UNITED LEAGUE.

New Branches Are Being Constantly Organized Throughout Ireland.

Successful Meetings and Large Attendance at Hacketstown and Crossakiel.

Emancipation From Landlordism Can Not Be Much Longer Delayed.

ULSTER FARMERS JOIN MOVEMENT

On Sunday last a very successful meeting was held at Hacketstown, on the confines of Carlow and Wicklow, to establish a branch of the United Irish League. The attendance, which was large and representative, was drawn from both counties and constitutes a striking evidence of the revival of political enthusiasm and of the quickening of the national spirit, which in many districts of Leinster has manifested all too few signs of healthy activity during the past few years.

On the motion of Laurence Brennan Rev. Father Ramsbottom was called on to preside.

The reverend Chairman, who was warmly received, said they had come together to establish a branch of the United Irish League. That was the first occasion upon which he had ever taken any public part in politics and his action was easily capable of explanation. During the past few years there was little to encourage any one to interfere in Irish politics and even during the past year events had occurred with which they did not all agree. So that it would not have been difficult for him, if he had been so inclined, to have discovered an excuse for his absence that day. But he was a strong believer in the unity of priests and people, and as they had expressed a desire to have the United Irish League established he felt it his duty to come there and assist in forming an organization to afford moral and material support to the Irish party. Without an organization for the Irish party to give the constant attendance in Parliament which was required in the interests of the country, and judging by their record this session under the able guidance of John Redmond they were men worthy of all the assistance which it was in the power of the Irish people to bestow.

Nicholas O'Toole, D. C., proposed the following resolution: "That inasmuch as nothing can be gained for Ireland without organization and agitation we hereby establish a branch of the United Irish League and call upon all Nationalists in the district to enroll themselves as members."

John Lyons in seconding the resolution urged upon the farmers the importance of sustaining the organization of the Irish party if they were anxious for compulsory purchase. Now that the Ulster farmers under T. W. Russell had joined in the movement it was impossible that the day of final emancipation from landlordism could be long delayed.

The resolution was put to the meeting and unanimously adopted.

D. W. Harbison, who was well received, said it was a truism in Irish politics that unless a vigorous agitation was sustained by a powerful organization the Irish party could not make their power properly felt at Westminster.

A successful public meeting under the auspices of the United Irish League was held in the Fair Green at Crossakiel, County Meath. Contingents were present from several of the surrounding districts, and the Kells brass band and the Killallon fife and drum band attended and played national airs. Patrick White (the Parliamentary representative of the constituency) and Lawrence Grinnell traveled from Dublin for the purpose of attending the meeting and both were very warmly received. Half a dozen members of the Royal Irish Constabulary were present and some of them took notes while the speeches were being delivered.

Patrick White, M. P., who was warmly cheered, addressed the meeting. P. F. Maguire, of Kells, who was warmly received, next addressed the meeting. He said Mr. White had been a constant attendant in Parliament and had done his work well there in striving to put out of office the worst Government that had ever ruled Ireland. He claimed the support of the people of Ireland for the United Irish League, because it aimed at securing the legislative independence of Ireland, at abolishing landlordism and establishing peasant proprietorship, and at securing for the agricultural laborers fair play and a chance of living in their own land by giving them their forefathers had been evicted.

Laurence Grinnell and Patrick Carpenter also addressed the meeting.

HONOR PERE GIBAUT.

Edward Fitzpatrick, of Kentucky, has prepared a magazine article showing that at least one-half the men who followed George Rogers Clark in his expedition that ended in winning Kaskaskia, Vincennes and the great Northwest from the British in the eighteenth century were Irishmen and Catholics. The article, moreover, contains much authentic data with regard to Pere Gibault, the patriotic priest through whose efforts almost solely the States of Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin were brought into the American Union.

It is a matter for regret that so little nowadays is said of Pere Gibault and the great work he accomplished. In his now famous novel, "Alice of Old Vincennes," the late Maurice Thompson, a non-Catholic, painted this French priest a hero, and one or two school histories of Indiana do him justice, yet for the most part his services remained unrecognized. If justice were done by the people of that great section he would have a monument. There is no doubt he deserves one as well as Pere Marquette, yet the politicians go on putting up monuments to men of their own kind, and even memory of Pere Gibault's deed is dying out. Why does not the great Catholic Northwest come to the front and see that his fame is secured in bronze or stone?—[Catholic Telegraph.]

ENTERPRISING.

Pat Henchy and Joseph Grauman Head a New Firm.

Main street will soon have another wholesale house that promises to add largely to Louisville's volume of business. Pat Henchy and Joseph Grauman, for many years two of the head men with the Robinson-Norton Company, and James Doyle, the leading dry goods merchant of Morganfield, with William Cross and Price Middleton, both prominent in the dry goods world, have leased for years the building now occupied by McCord & Wright on Main street, and will this fall open with the largest and most complete line of notions and ladies' and men's furnishings to be found in this market. They are possessed of experience and practical business ability, and it is their intention to conduct the largest business of this nature in the Southwest.

Messrs. Cross and Henchy were seen this week and said to the reporter: "There is no doubt about this deal," they said. "We have ample capital and excellent Eastern connections, and all of us are hustlers. We believe we have the strongest combination on the street. We are all men over forty years of age, all men of family and good habits. We have each had thorough experience and we mean business."

The combination is a strong one and should be very prosperous from the start.

FAIR IN CORK.

Next Great Exposition Will Be Held on the Banks of the Lee.

The following particulars relative to the great international exhibition which it is proposed to hold in Cork, Ireland, next year are at hand.

The donations toward the funds have been pouring in very generously since the matter was first mooted, some three months ago, and the latest development of the scheme is the selection of a site, known as the Mardyke, which extends for more than thirty acres in a spot very beautiful by nature and within the city limits.

The River Lee will intersect the grounds, and the service of electric trams will bring visitors right up to the scene from the various termini in the city. From the point of view of the exhibitors the place is suitable, and for side shows, such as the water chute, switchback railroad, shooting jungles and other miniature forms of recreation, it is excellent. It is thickly wooded and the River Lee at this point is clear and placid.

It is intended to attract as many visitors from the United States as possible, and the transatlantic carrying companies are being approached with a view to getting special fares for intending visitors to the exhibition. The companies have also been interviewed with regard to facilities for intending exhibitors.

RULE FOR CONVERSATION.

Here is a good rule for conversation with others. Never tell a person anything which others have said of him, of his doings or possessions, which you think will not give him pleasure. There is, of course, an exception to this rule when you feel it an imperative duty to state an unpleasant thing to another for his substantial good; but in that case you ought to approach the subject so cautiously, and speak of it so tenderly, as to show him beyond a question that it is a positive pain to you to be a cause of his discomfort. Never call it frankness, never look upon it as a playful way of speaking, for you to blurt out to him your own or other people's opinions which are likely to lessen his enjoyment in the thought of what he is or of what he has done. There is a great deal of cruel unkindness in this line on the part of those who would never dream that they could properly be called cruelly unkind.

ST. PATRICK'S OUTING.

The arrangements for the sixth annual outing of St. Patrick's congregation at Fern Grove on Monday, August 19, are about completed, and everything indicates the largest and jolliest crowd of the season on that occasion. The amusement features will be numerous and novel, and those who fail to attend will miss a great day's fun.

A crowd of popular young people from the West End spent Sunday last at Blackston's Mills back of New Albany. A prettier or more popular lot of Kentucky belles would be hard to find than those who helped to make the day one of thorough enjoyment and recreation. Among them were Misses Bee Mullackey, Katie Henley, Sadie Mills, Florence Clancy, Kittie Cannon, Nellie Wallace, Maggie and Sarah Maloney, Bee Small, Nellie and Mamie Holland, Nettie Haltman and Eva Raily. Among the gentlemen who partook of the hospitalities and did so much to make the day a pleasant one might be mentioned Messrs. Frank Scholtes, George Becker, P. M. Flynn, Charles Raily, John Raily, Tom Burkholder, Ben Herring, Will Martin, Pat Savage, Dennis Tierney and Charles Halbach.

RICK QUINN'S TREAT.

Last Thursday Rick Quinn, the Mayor of Limerick, and John Conway, Democratic Committeeman, and the Dick Croker of the Ninth ward, entertained a number of their friends with a fish fry in a shady grove in South Louisville. City

ONE HAPPY DAY.

Such Will be the Irish-American Reunion and Picnic.

A Spirited Meeting and Much Enthusiasm Aroused Thursday.

Reunion Committees Will Meet Again Wednesday Night.

ANOTHER LEASE OF HIBERNIAN HALL

The regular meeting of the Irish-American Society last Thursday night was presided over by President Nevin, who appeared highly pleased with the unexpectedly large attendance. The proceedings were lively and more genuine Irish enthusiasm was manifest than for some time past. All reported great interest being taken in the reunion and picnic to be held at Riverview on Monday, August 19, and predicted an enormous attendance.

After the reading and reference of applications the Membership Committee reported favorably upon M. J. Carroll, who was unanimously elected a member.

Sergeant-at-arms John Kenney was reported still ill at his residence on Second street, and the members and a special committee were requested to visit him. Mr. Kenney has been an indefatigable worker for the Irish-American Society, whose members miss him from the meetings.

The question of permanent quarters was at last settled. Thomas Claire, who was Chairman of the special committee, submitted a report, naming the various halls and terms upon which they could be secured, and upon motion it was unanimously voted to accept the terms offered by the Hall Board and continue to meet in Hibernian Hall on the first and third Thursday nights each month.

Michael McGillicuddy was elected Assistant Financial Secretary to Joe Byrne, who has done more real work for the society than any dozen members. Quite a number paid the advance assessment, and the members were elated over the report of Treasurer Keenan, who stated that all bills were paid with more money in the treasury than ever before.

President Nevin, M. W. Murphy, Secretary Flynn, Mike Francis, Tom Keenan, Thomas Claire and others made red hot talks, in which they scored those who were negligent of their duty as members, contrasting the action of their countrymen in this city with those of Chicago, St. Louis and Cincinnati. Secretary Flynn's remarks were humorous, and caused great laughter. He called attention in a forcible manner to the bad effects resulting from members absenting themselves from meetings, and urged all to hereafter attend and enter heartily upon the work of making the picnic a great success.

The speech of M. W. Murphy was given close attention and contained many good suggestions. He reviewed the history of the society and congratulated the members upon having succeeded in bringing the organization up to its present high standing despite the efforts of a few who failed in their attempts to use it for other than fraternal and benevolent purposes.

Secretary Byrne distributed tickets for the reunion and Mike Francis and James Casey were instructed to visit New Albany and Jeffersonville and invite the Irish-Americans of those cities to unite with their Louisville brethren at Riverview Park on August 19.

A special meeting of the Executive and other committees will be held Wednesday evening at the residence of Secretary John Flynn, 1423 West Broadway, and all members are urged to attend, as matters pertaining to the reunion must be acted upon. This is the first Irish-American celebration this season, and it is desired to make it an unqualified success. This can be done with but little effort.

YOUNG FOLKS MADE MERRY.

A crowd of popular young people from the West End spent Sunday last at Blackston's Mills back of New Albany. A prettier or more popular lot of Kentucky belles would be hard to find than those who helped to make the day one of thorough enjoyment and recreation. Among them were Misses Bee Mullackey, Katie Henley, Sadie Mills, Florence Clancy, Kittie Cannon, Nellie Wallace, Maggie and Sarah Maloney, Bee Small, Nellie and Mamie Holland, Nettie Haltman and Eva Raily. Among the gentlemen who partook of the hospitalities and did so much to make the day a pleasant one might be mentioned Messrs. Frank Scholtes, George Becker, P. M. Flynn, Charles Raily, John Raily, Tom Burkholder, Ben Herring, Will Martin, Pat Savage, Dennis Tierney and Charles Halbach.

RICK QUINN'S TREAT.

Last Thursday Rick Quinn, the Mayor of Limerick, and John Conway, Democratic Committeeman, and the Dick Croker of the Ninth ward, entertained a number of their friends with a fish fry in a shady grove in South Louisville. City officials and successful candidates were present and had an enjoyable time. The bill of fare, an elaborate one, was served in courses, and the wines included the choicest vintages of the old and new world. Such gatherings make men better and life more pleasant.

THE RED MEN.

Will Have Their Grand Pow-wow at Lebanon Saturday.

Delaware Tribe of the Improved Order of Red Men of Lebanon have extended invitations to the Red Men throughout the State and their friends to attend their grand pow-wow next Saturday. This tribe is one of the strongest in the State, embracing in its membership many of the most prominent and influential citizens of Marion county.

A special train will leave this city at 7 o'clock in the morning, arriving at the grounds at 9:30, and a large number of Louisville Red Men are expected to bring their wives, sisters and sweethearts. A good dinner will be provided and all the pleasures of a first class day's outing are assured by William H. Sweeney, J. P. Cummins, C. C. Spalding and the committee in charge.

Among the special attractions will be a modern balloon ascension and parachute jump, an up-to-date cake walk, and the champion high diver turning a double somersault from a hundred-foot tower into a small pool of water. Also a realistic robbing of an overland stage coach and scalping of the pale faces in true Western fashion. One of the best union bands in Louisville will accompany the special train from this city and furnish music during the day. A springboard platform, large and well polished, will be provided for those who may wish to dance.

TURN DOWN.

The City Railway Company Refuses Demands of Employees.

This week representatives of the local Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employees presented a list of grievances to the management of the Louisville Street Railway Company, chief of which was for regular hours, arbitration of differences, the right to buy uniforms in the open market and the reinstatement of men who are supposed to have been discharged recently for belonging to the union.

President Minary has answered, refusing each and every request. What the result will be can not now be foretold, though there is little likelihood of a strike, as Superintendent Funk has been employing large numbers of extras, who are supplanting the union men right along.

GALLANT IN IRELAND.

The Irish are a gallant nation, cables Max O'Rell. A few days ago an Irish judge was delivering judgment on an action brought by two charming ladies and he began thus: "Everything in this case is plain except Mrs. Murphy and her charming sister."

This reminds me of a remark once made by Lord Morris, the well known Irish judge of Appeal. A very pretty woman was giving her evidence in the witness box. "Are you Irish?" said Lord Morris. "No, my Lord, I am not," replied the lady. "And that is another grievance for Ireland," gallantly rejoined his Lordship.

BLUSHES MADE TO ORDER.

Women have long been aware that nothing is more becoming to a pretty face than a blush. The news comes that blushes can now be manufactured. A clever inventor, it is said, has fashioned a small instrument, the main part of which is a delicate spring, and this instrument, when concealed within the rim of a cap, hat or bonnet, is warranted to produce a beautiful blush at a moment's notice. All that is necessary is to lay a finger on the little instrument; the spring will then press on the arteries and compel the blood to rush up to the cheeks.

MOONLIGHT.

The employees of J. M. Robinson, Norton & Co. will enjoy a pleasant moonlight excursion on the steamer Columbia on Friday evening, August 16. A limited number of tickets will be disposed of and the affair promises to be quite a success socially. The following young gentlemen compose the committee of arrangements: Messrs. Robert Buckley, Louis Kieffer, Henry Hohmann, Albert Yost, R. Blackwell, John Woodruff, Paul Easton, Nello Smith, Will Daly, George Carnighan, John Burke and L. Timmons.

THINGS TO LEARN.

Learn these two things: Never be discouraged because good things go on so slowly here and never fail daily to do that good which lies next to your hand. Do not be in a hurry, but be diligent. Enter into the sublime patience of the Lord. Be charitable in view of it. God can afford to wait; why can not we, since we have Him to fall back upon? Let patience have her perfect work and bring forth her celestial fruits. Trust to God to weave your little thread into a web though the pattern show it not yet.

The valiant Boers still continue to win victories and capture British soldiers.

"BE WITH US."

Says Central Committee of the Catholic Knights of America.

Everything Ready For the Big Excursion to Jasper August 11.

Uniform Rank Will Act as Escort From Train to Park.

GRAND RECEPTION AWAITS VISITORS

The railroad excursion to be given to Jasper, Ind., on Sunday, August 11, under the auspices of the Central Committee of the Catholic Knights of America, representing the branches of this city, New Albany and Jeffersonville, is already an assured success, the indications pointing to the largest and most select excursion that ever left this city.

The Central Committee certainly deserves praise for its judgment in the selection of a place for the picnic and outing, Jasper being an ideal spot and possessed of all the advantages for a day of unalloyed pleasure. The management of the affair was some time ago placed in the hands of a special committee of sixteen, who selected the following well known gentlemen for officers:

Chairman—Jonathan Thickstun.
Secretary—Joe P. McGinn.
Treasurer—Edmund Rapp.

The meetings of the general committee have been well attended and the reports thus far are more than encouraging, an unusual interest having been aroused throughout the city.

At last night's session all the members were present when Chairman Thickstun called the gathering to order. The announcement that the excursionists would be met at the train by the Uniform Rank of the Catholic Knights of Jasper and escorted to the park with a band of music was received with applause. Another pleasing bit of news was that the people of that town and vicinity have tendered their carriages and wagons for the transportation of those who would prefer to ride to the park. Immediately upon the arrival of the train mass will be sung in the Catholic church, which is said to be one of the most beautiful in Indiana.

The picnic grounds are well shaded and located on the banks of a placid lake, and the amusements will include boat rides, water races, etc. Dinner and refreshments will be served on the grounds by the ladies of the Jasper church at reasonable prices, so there will be no necessity of being burdened with baskets.

Messrs. Jack Murphy, Henry Silberg and Henry Seibert will go to Jasper next Saturday and see that all the details are properly arranged for the comfort and pleasure of the excursionists. State President Michael Reichert and Joe P. McGinn will officiate as masters of transportation, while Will T. Meehan and John Score will have charge of the train and act as conductors. The refreshments are being looked after by Messrs. Henry Silberg and George Springman, and they will arrange a programme that can not but add to the day's enjoyment.

As this will be the only excursion to this pretty resort this year all who can do so should take advantage of the opportunity. The Catholic Knights can be depended upon to conduct the excursion in a creditable and satisfactory manner, and with this end in view will not allow any intemperate on the train, which leaves this city at 7 o'clock and New Albany at 7:15. The purpose of this excursion is a most laudable one—to raise funds with which to pay the assessments of those members who are sick and out of employment, thereby securing worthy families their insurance.

We understand that Conductor Meehan will take a number of his Irish friends to Ireland, which is only four miles beyond Jasper, he believing it is nearer than many of them will ever again get to the dear spot.

THE ZOO.

Manager Sheehan announces another great display of fireworks next Friday night at the Zoo. Lawrence Cane, the Irish magician, has proved a great attraction. Dave Flynn has also pleased his local friends, and the vaudeville bill presented is first-class in every respect.

WHAT'S IN A NAME.

The Baltimore Sun administers this dignified and earnest rebuke to those degenerates who think it humorous to saddle a helpless infant with a name which may degrade or humiliate it through the naming of a human being in serious and solemn affair. The name is given him to distinguish him as an individual from all other individuals, and the naming usually takes place at a solemn religious ceremony. To make an absurd name a mark of distinction, like circus clowns. A funny name is an ever-present disadvantage to a man. It ridicules him, makes him an object of ridicule, may injure him in business and might deprive him of all chance of a public career, however well fitted he may be for it.

IMPORTANT.

The Kentucky Irish American continues to be sent to subscribers even though the time actually paid for may have expired. We do not care to imply by doing otherwise that we are afraid to trust our readers for 100 cents, nor would we care to have that kind of a subscription list. It would benefit us considerably, however, and assist us in making our paper more attractive and interesting if those whose subscriptions are overdue would promptly remit to us the amount of same. It is quite embarrassing for us to be obliged to mention matters of this nature, but we trust our readers will understand our position, and that we will have no further occasion to call this subject to their attention.

GREAT STEEL STIKE.

The basis of the great steel strike which is at present paralyzing the greatest industries of the country, as viewed by the Pilot, seems to be this:

The billion dollar steel trust has assumed the right to regulate the affairs of the various companies absorbed by it—including rate of wages and prices of output. The Amalgamated Association of Steel, Iron and Tin Workers sought to offset this high-handed action by demanding that the rates of wages and hours of labor be made uniform in all mills.

The officials of the billion dollar trust refused to deal with the officials of the Amalgamated Association, declaring that they would deal only with the individual mills as to wages and hours of labor. A strike of the first magnitude has resulted, nearly 100,000 men going out. The most important industries of the country are crippled at a most critical time.

President Shaffer thus aims to compel the steel trust officials to deal directly with the Amalgamated Association's officials and extend the union rates to non-union men, believing that these latter are kept out of the union by their employers' threats of closed mills and abandoned towns, and will certainly join it when their fears are allayed by the success of the strike. This apparent coercion is the gentlest moral suasion, however, in comparison with the methods by which the steel trust compelled the individual mill owners into their corporation.

The Amalgamated Association realizes that it must have a perfect organization of workers, if it would hold its own with the perfect organization of the mills. President Shaffer forbids coercion of workmen into the union or violence to person or property. He believes in the ultimate success of the strike, which, however, he will not carry further than he can help, not wishing to embarrass unnecessarily the business interests of the country.

For several days a settlement seemed near at hand, but the latest news from headquarters is that the trust will not reopen the conference, and that a bitter and long continued struggle will be fought seems now certain.

EVICTIIONS IN IRELAND.

In the British House of Commons recently, the Chief Secretary of the Irish Government, in answer to a question asking for information, said that 20,352 families in that country had been evicted during the last fifteen years of the century just ended. The total of evictions is not known; but if we estimate at five in a family it would be over 100,000 people. Probably 2 per cent of the population were dispossessed of their homes.

An exchange says a notice of eviction in Ireland was characterized by Gladstone as a "sentence of death," and he knew whereof he spoke. But death is not the only terrible feature of eviction. The landlord's victims are often treated with a brutality almost incredible. Neither age nor sex is spared; nor the sick, nor the crippled, nor the weak-minded, nor the dying. No weather is to bad for "the devil's work," as the people appropriately call an eviction campaign. On the coldest day and the hottest, amid downpour of rain and storm of snow, the tenants of the grasping landlord are mercilessly flung out of their miserable dwellings and left to perish, as far as the authorities, their rightful protectors, are concerned.

Twenty thousand three hundred and fifty-two evictions! What do they mean? They mean 20,352 crimes of deepest dye, for such barbarous work, unknown as it is in all other civilized countries, would be unknown in Ireland also if that country was properly governed. They mean in a number of instances murder, for the infant, weak and aged sometimes die as a result of being thrown out on the roadside during inclement weather. They mean the oppression of the poor native at the instigation of the rich alien; the upholding of landlord power, at no matter what cost; and they are a great factor in the attempt to crush Catholicity and nationality, as represented by the Irish peasantry.

PROPER LEGISLATION.

A most excellent law, and one which it would be well to have introduced everywhere, passed the New York Legislature recently. This law provides that the sale or circulation in any manner of an obscene magazine, pamphlet or newspaper shall be deemed a misdemeanor. It also declares that any one who "sells, lends, gives away, or shows or advertises, or otherwise offers for loan, gift, sale or distribution to any minor child any book, pamphlet, magazine, newspaper or other printed paper devoted to the publication or principally made up of criminal news, police reports or accounts of criminal deeds, or exhibits upon any street or highway, or in any other place within the view, or which may be within the view of any minor child any book, magazine, pamphlet, newspaper, writing paper, picture, drawing, photograph or other article or articles coming within the description of articles mentioned in the first and second subdivisions of this section, or any of them, is guilty of the same offense."

The Post, which has been generally very fair in its comments on labor matters, takes strong exceptions to Bryan's views on the strike question. Mr. Bryan contends that if the workingmen were to vote unitedly there would be no need of strikes, and here is what our esteemed contemporary says: "Labor's share of the product of labor, skill and capital is not all it ought to be. Time and intelligent effort will rectify the wrong. Strikes may be mistakes, but they are not always mistakes, just as war is not always a mistake. A strike is a last resort. It should be postponed to the very last moment; but some time it will come, and some time there is no substitute. But the right or wrong of a strike will be no clearer with a Democrat in the White House than with a Republican. During Cleveland's administrations there were strikes, as under McKinley. The matter at issue lies far deeper than Bryan imagines."

A Chicago woman's faith in spiritualism was given a bad jolt not many evenings ago. The lady, who is an ardent believer in the occult science, attended a seance at the home of a medium, and during the evening was kissed by a supposed spirit. This particular spirit seems to have had a tendency toward earthly things, for the lady whom it osculated swears that it had fried onions for supper, and now the medium has a suit for damages on her hands. Science is not more potent than the odoriferous vegetable which figured so prominently in the seance.

It has been decided by the Supreme Court of Idaho that the veterans at the Soldiers' Home in that State have no right to vote. How does this decision strike you? We presume that the veterans are in the opinion of the court not entitled to vote because they are forced by age and infirmities to depend upon the generosity of the country which they defended for a home in their declining years. The decision may be good law, but it certainly reflects upon our much boasted freedom.

The Boston Hibernian does not help the Irish cause by its scurrilous imputations against Michael Davitt, William O'Brien, John Redmond and the United Irish League. Those safely anchored on this side of the Atlantic are hardly the ones to direct affairs in the old land. It would be much more creditable to encourage the United Irish League, which is but the first move toward emancipation from the landgrabbers.

It is reported, that the tobacco trust pays the girls it employs in the manufacture of cigars the princely sum of $2.50 per week, 60 cents of which goes for car fare. You will notice that the girls have $1.90 per week for living expenses. How do you think it would suit one of the trust magnates to live on such wages for a week or two during this hot weather? He would not see many yacht races, would he?

The National Socialist convention at Indianapolis on Thursday adopted resolutions indorsing trades unions and advising members to join. Such indorsements are worthless, as they are given only when their authors are without power and influence or wish to use their entrance to the trades union as a stepping stone to further political celebrity. Trades unionism needs none of these quasi indorsements.

The Milwaukee Citizen is using its hammer on the proposed Catholic Federation. Its editor writes in a manner that conveys the idea that he is oversuspicious. His lack of confidence in the Knights of St. John, the Catholic Knights, etc., nor his imputation that the most of those favoring federation do so for political purposes, will have no deterrent effect upon this grand movement.

We have reason to believe that Charles F. Grainger holds no ill-will toward those who opposed him in the primary. Mr. Jefferson's friends and all other Democrats who work for the success of the ticket will receive just recognition. This is as it should be and ought to result in a strong union of forces.

Bishop John Morre died Tuesday morning at his residence in St. Augustine, surrounded by nearly all the priests in Florida. His end was painless and peaceful. The funeral took place from the Cathedral yesterday morning, and was attended by distinguished prelates from all over the United States.

By the death of his estimable and beloved wife James McGill, editor of the Journal of Labor, sustained an irreparable loss. To him and his children we extend our heartfelt sympathy in this their hour of gloom.

The engagement is announced of Miss Edna Gilbert, the charming and accomplished daughter of Mrs. James C. Gilbert, who since her debut has been a great society favorite, and Archibald Hamilton, one of Lexington's most prominent and successful young men.

Miss Anna Madden, a well known New Albany girl, left this week for Indianapolis to accept a good position with one of the leading mercantile houses of the Hoosier capital. While her friends rejoice over her success they regret her departure from their midst.

Miss Mary Finegan, one of the most beautiful and really attractive young ladies of Limerick, is expected to arrive home next Saturday after a pleasant sojourn in the country. Her many admirers will rejoice to learn that she will return restored to perfect health.

Miss Jennie Sullivan, the pretty and attractive daughter of James Sullivan, one of Frankfort's leading merchants, will be the guest of her cousins, the Misses Sullivan, of 314 East Breckinridge street, until after the Conclave. A number of receptions will be given in her honor.

A euche that will attract a large number of society people is announced for next Wednesday evening at the residence of Frank Richards in New Albany. Quite a number from this city are expected to attend. The proceeds will be for the benefit of the new St. Edward's Hospital.

Miss Delia Rooney, a most accomplished and charming Nashville belle, is here as the guest of the Misses Finegan, Ninth and Kentucky streets, with whom she will remain until the latter part of September. Miss Rooney has many admirers who pleasantly remember her former visits here.

Among the visitors of note here this week were Sister Raphael and Sister Michelle, of the Ursuline Academy at Springfield, Ill., who are the guests of Mrs. Theresa McCawley, 1107 Second street. Before entering the Sisterhood the former was known as Miss Lillie Armstrong and the latter as Miss Florence McCawley.

Miss Mayme McNally, the oldest daughter of James McNally, formerly a well known resident of this city, but now of Galveston, Texas, is visiting her grandfather, Thomas McNally, 842 Sixth street. Miss McNally is accompanied by her uncle, John McNally, who formerly lived here, but for the past fourteen years has been engaged in mining in Colorado and Old Mexico.

HIBERNIANS.

What They Have Been Doing the Past Week—General News Notes.

Divisions 1 and 4 do not meet next week.

The County Board meeting was a success.

With all the officers installed, there should now be a united effort to double the membership.

Quite a number of Hibernians will accompany the Catholic Knights on their excursion to Jasper, Ind.

Division 3 meets Monday night. There are many matters of importance to be acted upon and President Cavanaugh would like to see a large attendance.

Those of our readers desiring information or applications for membership in any of the divisions may procure the same at the Kentucky Irish American office.

Fourteen candidates were initiated and six applications received by Division 9 of Valley Falls last week. State President Quinn installed the officers, and after the regular order a social hour was enjoyed.

Committees are arranging for a field day of the divisions of Pawtucket, Valley Falls and Central Falls, R. I., on Labor day. There will be a parade in the morning of the different divisions of Pawtucket and vicinity.

There was a large attendance at the last meeting of Division 12 of Providence in anticipation of the installation exercises and the initiation of ten candidates under the new ritual. The State President was present and made a congratulatory address.

The Hibernians of Racine, Wis., are holding their annual reunion picnic today. State President John Kelly, of Milwaukee, and other prominent speakers will deliver addresses. One feature will be the parade, in which the Milwaukee and Kenosha divisions have been invited to participate.

Thursday night there will be an important meeting of Division 2, the second oldest in the county. President Meehan urges all the members who possibly can do so to attend. Con Ford is expected to bring forward matters that will enliven the proceedings, and members of the County Board will be present as visitors.

A new division was organized in Providence last Sunday evening with a charter list of thirty-eight, many being influential business men from the east and south sections of the city. Addresses were delivered by prominent members of the order and the Ladies' Auxiliary and the new division was launched with every prospect of success.

WILL VISIT CORK.

A London dispatch says it is believed that the King and Queen will visit Ireland next April, and will probably open the international exhibition which is being organized in Cork. The King has already paid six or seven visits to Ireland. He first went there with his parents in 1849, and his last visit was in 1885.

READING.

Reading serves for delight, for ornament, and for ability; it perfects nature, and is perfected by experience. The crafty content it; the simple admires it; and the wise use it. Reading makes a full man, conference a ready man, and writing an exact man. He that writes little, needs a great memory; he that confers little, needs much cunning; he that reads little, needs much cunning to make him seem to know that which he does not.

The American Cardinal Talks of His Visit to the Holy Father.

Body Frail But Constitution Is Wonderful and Mind Lucid and Able.

IS SPENDING A WEEK IN DUBLIN

A special cablegram to the New York World from London says Cardinal Gibbons received its correspondent at the house of the Brazilian Minister, whose guest he was. In the course of conversation the American Cardinal said:

"I have enjoyed my stay in London greatly. I purpose to leave next week for a visit to Dublin before going home." Being asked concerning the object of his journey to Rome, the Cardinal answered:

"That is a matter of the strictest confidence between myself and the Vatican and I can not speak of it."

"I never saw His Holiness in better health. His body seems frail enough, but his wonderful constitution is as good as ever and his mind is marvelously lucid and able. The Holy Father's memory is astounding. He never forgets a face or a circumstance connected with that face, and will recall incidents of thirty and forty years ago which have been quite forgotten by the person most concerned." "A young couple from Quebec had an audience while I was there, and His Holiness instantly mentioned the name of the Bishop of Quebec, and recalled without any effort the names of others who was consecrated with him."

"The alarmist reports about His Holiness's health are unfounded. I believe His Holiness will live for many years to come."

"His Holiness takes a deep interest in America and Americans. He has received an immense number this year. The relationship between the Vatican and the United States is growing much closer, and the increase of the Catholic population in America interests the Pope greatly. He follows the work of the Catholic church in the United States with devoted attention and never loses an opportunity of expressing the delight it affords him."

"Do you think London a Godless city?" the correspondent asked.

"It doesn't strike me that way," the Cardinal responded, "although many people have that impression. I think there is a great deal of true piety and many pious works here. But you know every one finds in London what he comes to look for. There is everything in this great city. Certainly it is the very best governed city in the world. I have been greatly struck with the drainage and the water supply. Both seem perfect." "We in America can learn a great deal yet from London. Think of the huge congested population here, the low death rate and the people so orderly. Why, even the cabmen or busmen don't swear."

The correspondent could not repress a smile on hearing that remark, and His Eminence added:

"Well, at least I have not heard them. Then those steady policemen, too—they are a wonderful race; always quiet, always civil. The arrangements here, especially for the public health and order, are excellent."

His Eminence looks well. He has been the guest of Cardinal Vaughan, the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Denbigh and other Catholic magnates, who were all anxious to pay him honor.

FUN.

She—I am afraid you do not love me as much as you did before we were married. He—O, thousands times more, darling. She—O, you monster—then you married me without love!

"Papa," said the beautiful girl, "George and I are two souls with but a single thought." "Oh, well, don't let that discourage you," replied her father kindly. "That's one more than your mother and I had when we were married."

Suitor—I have come to ask for your daughter's hand. Father—Well, the fact is we are pretty crowded here as it is, and I—Suitor—Oh, I intend to take her away if I marry her! Father—Oh, well in that case—. But you did give me an awful start, my boy.

Mr. J. Cohen—I seen your young wife today for the first time, Abraham. Mr. A. Pink—Is dot so? Well, phot you think of her? J. Cohen—Awful nice woman, but she looks rather small for a big man like you. A. Pink—Oho! Dot's the beauty of her. It takes such a little bit of goods for her clothes!

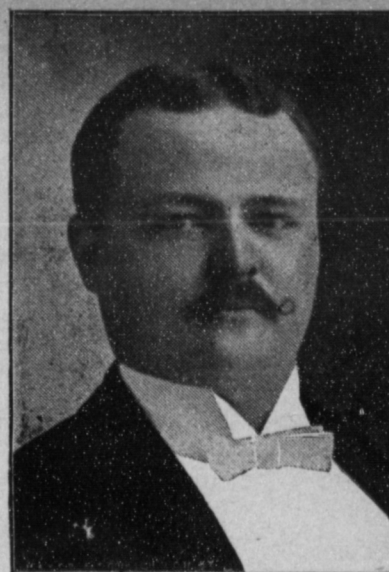

An Irishman who traded in small ware kept a donkey and a cart, with which he visited the different villages. On one occasion he came to a bridge where a toll was levied. He found to his disappointment he had not enough money to pay it. A bright thought struck him. He unharnessed the donkey and put it into the cart. Then getting between the shafts himself he pulled the cart with the donkey standing in it on to the bridge. In due course he was hailed by the toll collector.

"Hey, man!" cried the latter, "where's your toll?"

"Begorra," said the Irishman, "just ask the driver."

woman having said something to him which he did not like, it is alleged, he gave her a kick in the stomach, whereupon she fell unconscious and so remained until she succumbed a few hours after. Sheehan married into the family and there were living with him in the house his wife, father-in-law and the deceased. The court sent the prisoner for trial at the ensuing Cork assizes.

At Donegal assizes on Monday Edward Gillespie was arraigned for the murder of his wife at Cardonagh last September. The woman was found drowned, but in consequence of certain discoveries her body was exhumed, and medical examination showed that she was put into the water unconscious. Then the prisoner, who was an official of the workhouse, accused one of the inmates of having murdered her.

Justice Johnson, addressing the grand jury at the opening of the Kildare assizes on Tuesday said there were ten cases on the crown book. They were cases of ordinary offenses that they should always expect to encounter in the community in which they lived, but they did not in the smallest degree reflect upon the general peace and good order of the county, which the inspector informed him was in a most satisfactory condition.

The assizes for the County Kilkenny were opened on Tuesday before Judge Johnson, who in his address said there were only four ordinary cases for trial. The constabulary returns showed that the county was in a fairly satisfactory state. He did not place much reliance on these returns as an index to the state of the county and the grand jury, who lived among the people, could form a better opinion of the actual state of the county than he (the Judge) could merely from the constabulary returns.

In the Vice Chancellor's court on Monday an attachment was applied for against two men named Hartigan for intimidating and assaulting a man named O'Gorman, who at auction had been declared the purchaser of a farm at Charleville. The Hartigans were also bidders and after the sale they abused and violently assaulted O'Gorman, asking why he opposed them. Previous to the sale he had been warned by a relation of theirs that blood would be spilled if he interfered. His lordship granted the attachment.

The young man Kavanagh, who is charged with having set fire to the furze on the Hill of Howth, was again brought before the Magistrates at Howth petty sessions on Monday. The Magistrates decided to change the charge to the burning of brushwood and ordered the defendant to give substantial bail. During the proceedings it was stated that another serious fire had occurred on the Marshbrook Hill on Sunday, by which a valuable shrubbery was burned, and in a letter to one of the Magistrates Lord Howth stated that if these burnings continued he would restrict the public privileges over his land.

On Saturday morning Catherine Grimes, Mulgrave street, Kingstown, aged sixty-four years, and for many years court cleaner at Kingstown Police Court, was found dead on the floor of her bedroom. The deceased, who had been ailing for some time past, lived with her sister Mary, but both, it would appear, slept in separate rooms, and on Mary going into Catherine's room she found her partly dressed lying dead on the floor. The matter was reported to the police at Kingstown, who inquired into the facts, and reported to County Coroner Hart, who on the facts disclosed did not deem it necessary to hold an inquest.

Particulars of a very sad fatal accident have just reached Athlone from Cloneygowan. The victim was Richard E. Odlum, aged nineteen years, son of Henry L. Odlum, Kilkenny, Cloneygowan. The circumstances appear to be that deceased was sent armed with a gun to scare crows on his father's farm. While crossing a fence he laid the gun on a wall and then went to pull it over by seizing the muzzle. The trigger caught in some brushwood, there was a loud report and the unfortunate youth fell dead, the charge having lodged in his heart. His father was on the scene in a few minutes, having been attracted by the report. The deepest sympathy is felt for the members of the deceased's family, who are popular and respected in the district where they reside.

DRESS NOTES.

Foreign fashion reports tell us of a new flounce which rather reverses the usual order since it is wider in front than at the back.

Figured foulards make some of the loveliest of the summer gowns shown. They look particularly well made up with lace coats or boleros.

A very noticeable feature of summer dress is the simplicity of color, or rather the predominating use of neutral colors in delicate shades of gray and beige.

Women are wearing dark gray linen or canvas, and the material has a distinction all its own, partly because it is not and has not been much worn, but also because it is a good color.

A very effective thin gown for a stout woman is made of black tulle narrow black velvet ribbon run through in perpendicular lines and dainty applications of cretonne flowers between.

The pretty ways of using black velvet ribbon are legion, so it is impossible to describe them all, but if good taste is displayed one can not go very far astray in this phase of decoration.

Pretty little chaille negligees are to be found in the kimono shape, which are very pretty and attractive. They are in simple patterns of the chaille, and finished with a broad band of silk, binding the edge and passing around the neck and down the front.

Hampton & Mayho.

I have always held that I had the strongest will power of any man alive—to prove which statement I have always worked, and that under the most trying and discouraging circumstances. It is true the firm of Hampton & Mayho is a very creditable and reputable concern at present—at least that is what the world would say of us, and I am beginning to realize the fact myself. As far as the world was concerned I think we were always looked upon and were, for that matter, bright and intelligent men, but somehow our intellect and brilliancy did not answer our physical needs. I can laugh now when I glance back at our hopeful beginnings. I don't think there was a brighter and more light-hearted man in all Jackson, I might add in all Tennessee, than I when the firm first established its quarters in the southern part of the town. I simply have to close my eyes now to see that dingy old room with its two desks, a few chairs and a law book or two. That was the stock of the firm, together with what knowledge we were possessed of, and the firm consisted of Mayho and myself. Mayho was some ten years younger than I.

Each morning we sauntered down to our office leisurely, sitting there and reading law until we almost became a fixture, and living on hopes in the meantime until we grew hungrier and hungrier, and our reputation soon lost some of its importance. We could not eat that. Even our sign, that had been such a source of satisfaction to us at the beginning, after a month or two had rolled by and still no case came, took on a mean appearance.

One day, just such another day as this, when the snow was falling heavily, blinding as it fell, and I was sitting in the office all alone, having too much time to dwell on our prospects and not enough prospects to dwell upon, in came a sweet girl who looked to me then not a day older than seventeen. She was not what one would call a pretty girl, but had eyes and dimples that made you feel at home at once and were possessed of a tenderness that savored of the South.

Down went my feet from their accustomed place of elevation, out went the ashes of my pipe, and up I got in the most becoming way imaginable, and all in less time than it takes to tell of it. Indeed I almost fell over myself at the thought of a client, and at the brilliant idea that I, not Mayho, had been the one to play in luck. With hopes greater than Napoleon must have had at his most successful encounter I said graciously:

"Madam, will you be seated?"

Whereupon she smiled that smile that was the undoing of me and answered in those low, dulcet tones of the South:

"I shall not detain you a moment—it is a small matter of business."

To which I replied in all haste: "No matter about time." Indeed I was hoping she would keep me working a year with not even so much as an intermission for breath.

"I heard you were in need of a stenographer, and I am alone and friendless and must earn my livelihood. I thought possibly you could be of some assistance to me. I have my own machine. It belonged to my brother, and since my mother died—a short time since—I have been working at it daily and I believe I have mastered it at last. Of course, I am willing to work for a small salary."

Well, were ever a man's hopes blasted so unceremoniously as mine? I was absolutely speechless for some moments, but seeing it was expected of me to reply I finally mustered up courage enough to mumble:

"So your mother died, did she?"

"Yes, about a month ago."

"And your brother—where is he?"

"He" (at which the color rose to her face and she grew wondrously embarrassed, making me feel like kicking myself), "he went away—I don't know where he is. He does not work very much, I fear."

That settled it. When a man gives pain to an innocent, helpless creature, and when that creature is pretty and alone in the world, he is just bound to make amends, so I engaged her on the spot. Whereupon she thanked me simply and sweetly with a promise to return in the morning.

After she had gone I had time to think of the foolhardy thing I had done. It was so downright silly that I had a good laugh at my own expense. The simple idea of a man who had never had even so much as a case and did not feel sure that he would be able to meet his board bill the ensuing week thinking about much less hiring a stenographer. Where in the world was I to get her wages? After you have done something that can't be altered, there is nothing like taking the matter philosophically, so I took thought of a few trinkets I might pawn for the first week's service, and I hoped the Lord might remember I was striving to live before the next fell due.

But I began to feel rather uneasy when I thought of breaking the news to Mayho; he was a little more practical than I and not near so chicken-hearted. I was just pondering as to the best way to tell him when he came blustering in, shaking the snow off his feet and in fairly good spirits. I thought "now's my chance," so I made a brave attack.

"Well, we had a visitor while you were gone."

"By Jove! you don't mean a client?"

"No, not exactly—but a—a—serviceable individual."

"What the devil do you mean—explain yourself—I am beside myself with curiosity. I am beginning to believe, from your air of mystery that the gods are going to smile upon us at last. What's that Milton said about all things coming to those who wait?"

"Well, I was just thinking—"

"The deuce you were—what right had you to think? But let's have your thoughts."

"Well, I was thinking it might be a good plan—it might help appearances, you know—to have a stenographer. What do you think?"

"Think? Why I think you're stark crazy! I have just spent the last hour running through the snow trying to tramp down the thought of my creditors."

"Well, sane or insane, the act is done, and I shall be responsible for the consequences."

If I live to be a hundred I think I can still see Mayho gasping for breath as I made this startling announcement. It took him fully ten minutes to regain his senses, and then he said in thorough disgust: "Well, you are a bigger fool than I took you to be! But what under the sun possessed you to do such an idiotic thing?"

Then I proceeded to tell him of the circumstances and tried to prove to him how impossible it was to do otherwise, but he did not seem to be able to see it my way. Miss Hall came and the firm did most as flourishing a business that first week as it does now, and that is speaking very well for it. There was no end of petitions, answers, motions, affidavits and demurrers under the name of Brown, Smith, Jones and every conceivable name that our imagination could sum up. The first week passed and I parted with some of my jewelry, sending Miss Hall home happy, and we were well into the middle of the next week when the event of events happened and the client came at last.

She was only a poor, ignorant woman whom some wealthy man of Jackson had beaten out of an old house. It seems she had bought from him this little home, paying for it in installments with the money she earned while washing, ironing and scrubbing, etc., for his family and for each payment he had given her a slip of paper with something written on it and she believed the writing to be a receipt, whereas it was worthless. After a time, when she had paid off the whole debt, he gave her a bogus deed. After she had held possession of the land for a number of years he died and the money descended to his son, who laid claim to the land. I would not take that case again for three such homesteads as a gift, so intricate were the questions of law, but I took it then for virtually nothing, so glad was I to get a case, and in the end it had its reward. Mrs. Burke brought to us several neighbor friends who had matters for litigation and they in turn sent their friends, so with this case our prosperity really began. We tugged along at that case for nearly a year, when at last a day was set for trial. Mr. Bell, the man who had done Mrs. Burke this grievous injury, had been a prominent citizen and hence the court-house was well filled. The case aroused much interest arising from the fact that it possessed many delicate points of law.

I must admit that I felt a little nervous and when, after pleading that case for three hours, the Judge decided in our favor, I think Mayho and I beamed with self-satisfaction. I have scarcely been so happy since, because on that day future success was assured to us. It was almost amusing to note how many lawyers and Judges who had passed us by unnoticed while we were undergoing the starving period, now that we had achieved our success, had an indistinct recollection of having seen us in some out of the way place before; some of them absolutely went so far as to get us to look after some minor matters for them.

Yes, I can smile at all of that now. It is singular how unpleasant and disagreeable things lose strength as time wanes. It is certainly a blessing so. But I can not even now smile when I recall the day, several years later, when Miss Agnes was home from the office sick, and a telegram came from that cursed brother of hers. I, thinking it was mine, opened it hastily only to find that her good-for-nothing brother wanted a hundred dollars. A hundred dollars from that poor girl who was earning her livelihood, and a hard struggle she had of it, too! When I think of it I can grow indignant this very day! It seemed from the telegram that he had stolen the money and was about to be prosecuted unless the money was refunded at once. My first thought was to let him go to the devil and have a good, hot time of it; but the sad, pale face of Miss Agnes seemed to come between him and me, so I paid the hundred dollars and tore the telegram into atoms. It is a strange fact how we men do so many things under the garb of charity and sympathy that really gives us so much inward satisfaction.

"Hello, dad!" said Mayho some months later, rushing into my office in that boyish way of his that is most captivating. He has always humorously called me "dad."

"Well, Mayho, what good news have you now, or what sort of scrape have you gotten into—for I declare you look real serious and the air of seriousness does not somehow sit very gracefully on your shoulders?"

"Oh, I'm in a pickle and I want you to help me out, dad, won't you?"

"Of course I will; but I do not fancy you will need much assistance. There, now, I'm all attention; tell your story!"

"I knew you would help me out. Well, the truth of the matter is I'm in—in—in—"

"Is 'love' the word you're looking for?"

"Yes."

"Old boy, I am glad of it! You are able to support a wife, are a pretty nice sort of a fellow generally and there is no real objection to you that I can see, so where does the trouble come in?"

"I haven't proposed."

"Well, you are a goose! No trouble about that at all. Tell the girl you love her and after you have been accepted or rejected take it very philosophically and come and tell me the result. But hold on a minute—who is this girl?"

"Why she's Miss—Miss Hall."

"The devil you say! You infamous cur! You're not worthy to think of her. Marry her! Have you gone stark mad?"

"I know I am not good enough for her, but I didn't come here to hear you say so and I expected at least of all from you! She would have a good home, and I love her dearly, and it seems to me that that would be better than plodding on here for a living."

"Forgive me, Mayho; you are right! There is no reason why she shouldn't love you, and I hope she will. I want to see both of you happy; so, old boy, go ahead and I'll do the best I can for you."

"I knew you would—you've been mighty good to me, and if she will have me you can bet you'll have the best room in the house!"

I nodded my head in the affirmative and smiled, a very lame smile, I fear, but he was so happy in what he hoped the future would bring that he never thought of poor old me. Dear boy, he could not realize how he was almost breaking my old heart by telling me he would fix me up a nice room. How could he know that for the last eight years scarcely a day passed that I did not picture myself on some future winter night beside a great, big, open fireplace of my own and Agnes with her darning and mending very near me, while I read some story to her, and how by and by she would drop her work and her little hand steal into mine and her head rest on my great coat sleeve with that contentment and confidence which love alone can bring. My God! To see this dream shattered was awful and my heart refused to give my Agnes up—even though a dozen others laid claim to her. Yet this dreaming on of mine would be mighty poor solace when she became a living reality to Mayho.

How I passed through that night I don't know, and I don't want to know, but somehow morning came at last and with it light. Indeed I had scarcely gotten out of bed, when in bobbed Mayho, looking so funeral that I guessed the whole story without even hearing so much as the prologue.

"Well, dad, I'm done for. She won't have me, that's certain."

"Don't despond so soon," I found myself replying, although I could not help feeling a little inward satisfaction. "She's just trying to prove your loyalty—to prove you as the gallant knights of old were proven!"

"No, she said she was sorry and all that kind of stuff that you read about in novels and somehow makes you feel mighty uncomfortable in reality, but her answer was final—no doubt about that!"

"Didn't she give any reasons?"

"Reasons! Oh, yes. She told me she was in love with another man—a man older than I, who had been very kind to her when she was destitute and most in need of a friend, and who, once when her brother seems to have been in disgrace paid him out to save her pain and—"

"Stop, Mayho! you don't—you can't mean that she loves me!"

And then both of us, who had been so blind a day since—as I believe it is the portion of all men to be—saw.

Several years have passed since then, and my dream has been more than realized, for now as we sit by our happy fireside together the junior member of the firm, little Mayho (Agnes, out of the sweetness of her heart, insisting that the baby should be called Mayho to give out of her plenty at least a little joy to Mayho's bachelor heart), climbs his Uncle Mayho's knees and with his mother's eyes begs for a story. Did I say beg? He never asks but once.

It is such an hour as this that renews and strengthens our love and more than compensates for our long, low, weary years of struggle.—Ellen Cawthon in Donahoe's.

FASHION FOIBLES.

It is a difficult thing for a woman to take to a jacket after the weather has once been warm enough for her to leave it off.

A new style of skirt occasionally seen among the thin gowns is ruffled up the back. Six flounces above the one at the hem, which extends all round, make the best effect.

Long black and white ostrich plumes are very much worn this season, and they are put on the hat to droop not a little at one side, touching the shoulder in some instances.

A very pretty skirt model which is carried out in foulard as well as the thinner fabrics is knife plaited all around and stitched down in a varying number of rows from the waist to the knee.

The simple frock of white mull, very much on the order of the gowns worn by our grandmothers in their youth, has come around again for the young girls who can affect this style with becoming grace.

Lacings of velvet are common enough, because they are a mode of trimming which every one can copy, and yet we see a bit of it here and there on many of the very well costumed, which are supposed to be exclusive in style.

The craze for bands extends to all kinds of materials, and combinations and the modes of using velvet ribbon multiplies apace, as it produces the desired effect without so much labor as the stitched silk bands necessitate.

Both black and white silk tassels are among the novel features of dress trimming, and we see them arranged in pairs down either side of the front of the bodice on a black and white foulard. Their uses, no doubt, will multiply later on.

Bronze boots and shoes are to be seen in the shops, but they are not worn to any extent. It is only when one wants to have things match that they are worn once in a while. A woman wearing a girle of bronze silk not long ago with a light silk gown wore also bronze shoes and stockings to match.

SHOCKED.

Young John Tully Found Dead by His Mother Wednesday Morning.

Had Passed Away During the Night Without Any Warning.

Death of Mrs. James McGill Causes Sorrow in the East End.

MANY DEATHS DURING PAST WEEK

Among the many deaths of the past week none was so sad or heartrending as that of young John Tully, the twenty-four-year-old son of the famous old life-saver. The unfortunate young man had been in the best of health and was out Tuesday evening with a number of his friends with whom he remained until about 9 o'clock, when he returned to the family home, 232 Third street, and retired for the night, never once hinting at feeling unwell.

Wednesday morning his mother went to where he was sleeping to awake him for his breakfast before his day's work, and was almost paralyzed by finding him cold in death. A piercing scream from her brought the young man's father to the sad scene. The distracted parent found his oldest son lying face downward, and it was not until he turned the body over that he believed life was extinct. The features were calm and gave no indication of a death struggle or in what form the summons came, though it is generally thought to have resulted from heart disease.

John Tully, Jr., was twenty-four years old, and was employed at Grainger's foundry. He was steady and exemplary in his habits and was liked by all who knew him. He was the eldest son in a large family of children, and his loss will be keenly felt just at this time, when the business outlook for the future was assuming a bright hue. His funeral took place Thursday morning from the Cathedral and was very largely attended. There is a sincere feeling of sympathy for the father and mother in their great loss.

Profound sorrow prevailed throughout the East End Wednesday when news of the death of Mrs. Kate McGill, wife of James McGill, became known. Though she had not been enjoying good health for some time her death was a shock to her many friends, by whom she was admired for her many Christian qualities and amiable disposition. Mrs. McGill was a fond and loving wife and mother and a devoted communicant of St. Francis of Rome church in Clifton, and the bereaved husband and children have the heartfelt sympathy of the community in their irreparable loss. The funeral took place yesterday morning with requiem high mass, Rev. Father White being the celebrant. In the course of his funeral sermon he paid high tribute to the worth of the deceased and brought tears to many eyes by his touching references to her many kind acts. The church was thronged with friends and relatives, who sorrowfully followed the remains to St. Louis cemetery, where amid beautiful flowers she was tenderly laid to rest.

Joseph A. O'Connor, aged thirty-one years, and a well known and highly respected young man of the West End, passed peacefully away at the residence of his father, Patrick O'Connor, 822 Eighteenth street, after an illness of over a year, though it was not until about two months ago that he was compelled to take to his bed. Mr. O'Connor had long been engaged in the Government work on the Falls and was very popular with his fellow-workmen. Besides his father he leaves three brothers, William, George and Charles. The funeral services, which were conducted by Monsignor Gambon at St. Patrick's on Wednesday morning, were very largely attended. A kind and affectionate son and brother, his loss will be sincerely mourned.

John Danaher, one of the most popular young men in the East End and a well known insurance agent, died unexpectedly Monday afternoon at the residence of his mother, 620 Washington street, after a short illness of bowel complaint. Besides his mother he leaves a brother to mourn his loss, and much sympathy is felt for them in their affliction. The deceased was well known among the poor and many will miss his kindly advice and quiet charity. His funeral took place Wednesday morning from the Church of the Blessed Sacrament with solemn requiem mass, and a long line of carriages followed the remains to St. Louis cemetery. May he rest in peace.

We regret to announce the death of Mrs. Catherine Kieffer, mother of Louis J. Kieffer, of this city, and Mrs. Frank Perry, who died Monday at the home of the latter at Meadow Lawn. She was a Christian lady, who had led an exemplary life and was respected and loved by a large circle of friends. Her funeral took place with requiem high mass at St. Mary's church Wednesday morning, the edifice being thronged with mourning friends and relatives.

Miss Anna Richards, a well known and highly esteemed lady of New Albany, died Sunday morning at the Gray-street Infirmary in this city from the effects of a surgical operation. The news of her death was received with deep regret by her wide circle of friends and acquaintances. She was the daughter of Magistrate Richards and a devout member of St. Mary's church, where her funeral took place Tuesday morning with requiem high mass.

The friends of George Lemmon were shocked to learn of his death, which occurred Monday night at his residence, 2431 Bank street. He was a well known express man and was only in the prime of life, twenty-nine years old. His funeral was largely attended at St. Cecilia's Wednesday morning, Rev. Father Kelleher conducting the solemn services. His remains were laid to rest in St. John's cemetery.

Martin Reilly, who suffered an attack of sunstroke Saturday afternoon, died at an early hour Monday morning, although everything that loving hands and medical skill could do was resorted to in the hope of saving his life. He was thirty years old and resided at 313 First street.

DOWN TOWN LAWN FETE.

Arrangements are being made by the members of St. Cecilia's parish to give a lawn fete and reception on the evenings of September 3 and 4 on their lawn at Twenty-fifth and St. Cecilia street. One of the features of the occasion will be an open air concert on the first evening. The programme, which has not yet been completed, will be announced later.

Robert J. Hagan, the popular young lawyer and Democratic nominee for Prosecuting Attorney of the Police Court, left Tuesday for a visit of ten days or two weeks with his uncle, John Lilly, at Fairfield. Mr. Hagan will upon his return enter actively into the campaign for the success of the Democratic ticket.

SISTER MARY DEAD.

A Bardstown dispatch of Wednesday conveys the sad intelligence of the death of Sister Mary Raphael, who passed away at Nazareth from an illness of consumption. She was known in the world as Miss Mamie Price, and was a daughter of the late George E. Price, of Daviess county. She was thirty-two years old.

SEWING SOCIETY.

The St. Anthony's Sewing Society will meet Monday night at the temporary quarters of the Franciscan Sisters on East Gray street, between Hancock and Clay, and it is hoped ladies will be present from all the congregations to assist in the work of aiding the good Sisters in their noble undertaking.

LABOR NEWS.

Busy Session of the Central Body Last Sunday Afternoon.

President Klein Resigns and William Jacobs Succeeds Him.

Making Extensive Preparations For the Celebration of Labor Day.

HUMPHREY KNECHT GRAND MARSHAL

The regular monthly meeting of the Central Labor Union was held at Beck's Hall last Sunday afternoon, the proceedings being interesting to the large number of delegates present. President Klein tendered his resignation, which was accepted, and Vice President William Jacobs was elected for the unexpired term. Owing to the large amount of business the election of a Vice President was postponed until the next meeting.

Several new delegates were seated and a large number of communications read, the most important being from the Cigar-makers' Union of this city, the Central Labor Union of Indianapolis and Rome, Ga., the Laundry Workers of Troy and the Textile Workers of Danville, Va., where 5,000 employees are locked out for refusing to work longer than ten hours. The President of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, E. W. Tatum, of Chicago, made a ringing speech, in which he urged union men to redress their wrongs at the ballot box. There were among them men of ability and integrity who could be elected to office to secure the passage of reform measures and necessary labor legislation. His speech was well received and warmly applauded.

An invitation from the New Albany Trades Council to take part in their Labor Day picnic was received, and also a vote of thanks from the International Association of Machinists for the generous donation to their strike fund.

The Grievance Committee asked for further time for the investigation of matters now in its hands, which was granted.

The Chairman of the Labor Day Committee made a report of the work done thus far, which is of a very encouraging nature and augurs well for a grand celebration.

Organizer Clarence Pratt, of Cleveland, addressed the body on the differences existing between the City Railway Company and its employees. His statements bore out the assertions made in these columns heretofore, and it is not possible for the railway men to much longer stand the attacks upon them without making a fight for their rights.

At a meeting this week of the Labor Day Committee Humphrey Knecht was elected Grand Marshal, and it was predicted that every labor union in the city would be in the parade that day. Meetings of this committee are being held every week.
